Butters Row fire

A fire in the Frank Powers home on Butters Row, Wilmington caused extensive damage to the kitchen and a bedroom above, on Friday afternoon. The fire, which began about 4:30 p.m., was believed to have been the result of an electric stove that was left on. The rest of the house sustained smoke and water damage. The same house was damaged by a bedroom fire, several years ago.

Well remains closed

The Trichloroethylene problem

There are people in Wilmington who are worried, who want to sell their homes, who have observed brown water in their yards and think they may become poisoned. They have been asking questions of the clerk for the Water Commissioners. They came into the Town Crier office to consult on the problem.

The problem is trichloroethylene (TCE), a colorless liquid which is heavier than water. It is reported to be a carcinogenic. Twenty communities in Massachusetts have had the experience of having the state close down wells because trichloroethylene has been found in the water.

Tcichloroethylene is now being found in California, if that is any comfort or concern to the people of Massachusetts.

Trichloroethylene has a distinctive odor, well, like Carbona, which is an ordinary household cleaner. It is quite probable that a lot of the TCE as it is called, that is to be found in the area comes from the septic systems of households, or possibly from such operations as the reconstruction of an old automobile in the back yard by a member of the junior set. It is often used in machine shops, to degrease metal. Undoubtedly, too, some comes from commercial manufacturing plants. TCE is an ingredient in solvents, both household and commercial.

Being heavier than water, it sinks into the ground, and then flows along some of the underground strata. Occasionally it finds its way to municipal or private wells. As was said before, it is clear in color, and has a distinctive odor.

As a carcinogen (i.e. cancer causing agent) it seems to be quite potent. Where ordinary chemical compounds are sometimes measured in parts per thousand, or parts per million, TCE is measured in parts per billion. If the Massachusetts state laboratory in Lawrence detects more than 10 parts per billion parts of water, the well from which the sample came is deemed unsafe, and is closed.

Locally, Wilmington has a man who is considered a chemistry authority. George Boylen has a position of authority in one of the local scientific institutions, one that is perhaps the leader in the world.

He is scoffing at the findings of the state, with regard to the Chestnut Street well. He thinks the town should consider taking legal action, to make the state prove what it says is so.

This man points at the TCE scare in the Town of Lunenberg. In that town water from the municipal well was tested in the state laboratory in Lawrence, and declared to have TCE.

For three months the town had to truck all its water in, from an out-of-town source.

Then it was found that there was an error, and the town did not have any TCE in its water supply. Lunenberg is now using the water supply that it could not use for three months this summer.

The local man says that the same conditions seem to exist at the Chestnut Street well. He points to the fact that the readings do not agree, for test holes a small distance from the well. That, he says, raises his suspicions.

The Chestnut Street well is 1300 feet from Chestnut Street, and probably 1200 feet from the nearest septic tank. It is also about 1300 feet from the site of the old town dump, and a stream flows in the area between the old dump and the well. Under such circumstances the source of TCE in the Chestnut Street well, if there is any, is a real mystery.

The Board of Water Commissioners has hired a consultant to delve into the problem. They are also planning to connect the well directly to the new water purification station, for which a town meeting has been called, on September 24.

The Water Commissioners believe that if there is any TCE in the well it is quite probably that the purification plant will remove it. A full report can be expected, at the town meeting.

Governor to visit Wilmington

Governor Ed King has sent word to Wilmington that he plans to participate in the Wilmington Democratic Town Committee annual cookout, Saturday. The notice, he said, was barring any last minute situation which necessitated a change.

The cookout starts at 4 p.m. at the Fred F. Cain parking lot, on Main Street. The cookout is to last until midnight.

Japanese students return home

The Japanese students have returned home, to Japan. For several days radio and TV regaled their audiences with stories and pictures of the students, 150 in number. They were stranded because of some misfeasance on the part of an agency in Japan.

Twenty-eight of the students left Logan International Airport on September first. Eight of them had been hosted by Wilmington families. The farewell was quite emotional.

They had been scheduled to leave for New York on a bus from North Reading, on August 29. The bus left on time, but without the students. Carolyn Harris of Marion Street Wilmington, and Jeanette Gilberti of North Reading were the organizers of the host families. On advice of these two women and of their hosts, the students did not board the bus.

A Tokyo based organization was reported to be at fault. The organization failed to provide money for return fairs to Japan, though the parents of the youngsters had paid. E.F., a Connecticut based agency, made arrangements for local coordinators.

The students were enrolled in the local EF program. It provided for a cultural exchange for the students.

The students spent three weeks in Wilmington, enjoying English classes and day field trips, in addition to family activities. One highlight was a visit to Boston where they toured M.I.T. and Harvard Square. Another was a visit to Cape Cod, where they spent a day. They visited Old Sturbridge Village and Salem. They even watched the Red Sox win a victory at Fenway Park.!

The host families, on August 28 were determined to prevent the students from having to pay more money, for their fairs. They refused, as Mrs. Gilberti said "to panic" and have the children wire home for more money.

Transportation was eventually provided, and the students left New York for Tokyo on September first.

The host families in Wilmington included at least two persons who had served in Japan with the US Forces, and had more than a little knowledge of Japanese. Paul Rose of Boutwell Street had served with the US Air Force in Japan, and Mrs. Pat Gately of Oakdale Road was in Japan while serving in the Women's Army Corps.

Hosts were: Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Carroll; Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Devlin; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Durante; Dr. and Mrs. George Eisenberg; Mr. and Mrs. William Gately; Mr. and Mrs. Harry King; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rose, and Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Harris.

Capt. John Harnden's proudest moment

Wilmington has its own story, with reference to the Constitution of the United States, and that of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. That story is a part of the life of Capt. John Harnden.

Joseph, John and Joshua Harnden were brothers and served in the Revolutionary War. Joseph died, while serving in Cambridge, "in the lines" five months after Bunker Hill. John commanded a company at Bunker Hill, and became a state legislator. Joshua's service is not known to the writer, but eventually he became a Colonel in the militia. His name is best known in Wilmington, because of the Harnden Tavern, which he owned, and which is now an historical landmark.

John Harnden must have been an impressive individual to know. He was a captain of the militia, shortly after the French and Indian War, or as it was called in Europe, the Seven Years War. It seems that he must have served in that war, probably as an officer. Anyway, five years after the war was over, a son was born to Capt. and Ruth Harnden, in 1768, according to the Wilmington records.

They lived in the home of his ancestors. The site is now occupied by a house at 67 High Street. To the east of the house are some very, very old cedar trees, in a row, planted by an early Harnden. Possibly they were planted by his grandfather.

The home was there in 1667 by the writer's computation, and possibly earlier. It was still standing at the time of the Civil War, according to the late Philip Buzzell, for his grandmother could remember it, and she told him of it. Philip was a descendent of Capt. John.

For a man to have served at Bunker Hill is an historical item of great credit. Capt. John served at Bunker Hill, in command of one of the companies of the Second Middlesex Regiment of Foot.

He had been the Lieutenant of the Wilmington Minutemen. Evidently he stepped back in rank, to so serve. Possibly he had completed whatever tour of duty he had as a captain of militia.

It was only a few days after Concord that he was asked to form his own company of soldiers, to serve in the second Regiment. With these soldiers, he served at Bunker Hill.

Shortly afterward Capt. John Harnden was elected by his fellow townsmen to represent Wilmington in the new State Legislature. Not much is known of his service, except for one event which has come down through the years, as a part of Wilmington folklore.

It was in 1779, 200 years ago, that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts prepared for itself a Constitution. Capt. John Harnden was serving in the legislature at the time. That constitution was adopted in September 1779 - 200 years ago this month.

John Adams of Quincy, he who later became President of the United States is the man who is popularly given the credit for the writing of that constitution. Undoubtedly he had help. The Rev. Isaac Morrill of Wilmington was one of the people in Massachusetts who could have contributed to the writing of that Constitution.

Isaac Morrill as a young man at Harvard had made a study of the British and French philosophers, such as Locke and Rousseau. His work shows, in the Wilmington Declaration of Rights, prepared in 1774, which has appeared in the Town Crier, and which also appeared one year on the cover of the Wilmington Town Report.

If the Rev. Mr. Morrill did not directly contribute to the writing of the Constitution, at least he had the ear of Capt. John Harnden.

When the time came for the adoption of the Constitution there were a number of men who refused to vote for it. One of those was Capt. John Harnden.

That constitution did not have, within it, a guarantee of the Rights of Man. That was why Capt. John would not vote for it. Capt. John and a couple of dozen other men.

Those men held up the adoption of the Constitution of Massachusetts until there was incorporated in it a Bill of Rights. That is a moment of supreme importance, in the formation of the United States.

Ten years later, in Philadelphia, after secret sessions that had lasted all summer, a group of about 50 men produced a document of government which has since that date been called the Constitution of the United States.

Before it was accepted, there were 10 amendments. Those amendments are, and have been called, The Bill of Rights - the first 10 amendments to the Constitution.

Ten years before that Capt. John Harnden of Wilmington was in the midst of a discussion in Boston, fighting for that same Bill of Rights, in the Constitution of Massachusetts.

Such is the folklore of Wilmington. If it is true, and it quite probably is, it could be called Capt. John Harnden's proudest moment.

A report that a pond was missing from property owned by John Lucci sent the members of the Wilmington Conservation Commission on a pond hunt, on Friday. The land, at the corner of Lowell and Woburn Streets in Wilmington, is being developed by Lucci. The members of the commission found a different pond. They are shown looking it over, with John.

Research grant to Abcor

Fifth District Congressman James M. Shannon announced recently that ABCOR, Inc. of 585 Main St., Wilmington, has been awarded an extension of a contract with the Federal Government.

The contract extension, for $120,815, through January 26, 1981, is from the Department of the Interior's Office of Water Resources Technology, Shannon said.

The Walden Division of ABCOR is based in Wilmington, and currently employs between 30 and 40 professionals, who conduct research and development in various areas of environmental issues, such as air and water quality control.

Shannon added that the contract extension award involves the development of modules and accompanying durable adhesive systems for the production of potable water and desalinization mechanisms.

"The outcome from this research can lead to significant new supplies of drinking water in areas with contaminated wells, in addition to leading to more economical ways of deriving needed water from the sea. I am happy that this extension was awarded to ABCOR, and I will continue to do all I can to see that similar programs for research of this kind are conducted in this area," Shannon concluded.

Family weekend offered by First Baptist Church

The First Baptist Church of Wilmington has announced a special family weekend to kick off their fall schedule, September 14, 15 and 16.

The weekend schedule will include: a Weiner Roast at 6 p.m. followed by ventriloquism and gospel illusions at 7:30 on Friday; a special session with Neato the Clown for kids under 12 from two until three o'clock and a Family Night program at 7:30 on Saturday; and the Rev. and Mrs. Smith will be featured in both the 9:30 a.m. Bible School and 11 a.m. Worship Service on Sunday.

The public is cordially invited to attend all services. For more information, call the church at 658-8584.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

We are proud to have been among the 30 families in the Wilmington area who hosted visiting Japanese students recently, while living in our homes during a study program. These students were victimized by a fradulent Japanese travel agency that abscounded with the money to be used for their airline tickets home.

After reading the Boston papers, the host families refused to allow their Japanese guests to go to New York unless a guarantee was made that tickets were available. This stand forced the agency to admit that it had neither airline tickets nor hotel rooms in New York for students while they awaited their flights. Thus, our guests stayed longer in our homes rather than on the streets of New York. We are proud to have been associated with these host families, all of whom believed hospitality means a great deal more than board and room.

We hope the negative publicity will not keep Wilmington families from participating in future exchange programs. There are many agencies that have been successfully coordinating such programs for years without such incidents. Foreign students come here to improve their English language skills, study and experience life in America first-hand.

Therefore as hosts we have much to offer them, and we, in turn, have much to receive from them. We can assure readers if they were ever to participate in a reputable program their efforts would be richly repaid in a wealth of learning, sharing and wonderful memories as was ours.

Finally, we would like to thank volunteer coordinators Carolyn Harris (Wilmington) and Jeanette Giberti (North Reading), the EF Institute of Cultural Exchange which assumed responsibility for the stranded students, and all our friends in Wilmington who helped make our Japanese guests feel welcome.

Sincerely,
George and Maida Eisenberg

Dear Larz:

From the 25th to the 29th of August, my wife and I participated in an absolutely fantastic experience. We, along with Mrs. Shirley Dionne, Mrs. Kathy Patterson, Ed Spence and Rick Anderson (a student at Lowell University) chaperoned the Wilmington High School Band at a band camp on Bear Island in Lake Winnepesaukee.

This group of students led by Miss Jackson and Miss Mette, are a group of which any town can be proud. Their parents are to be commended. For the most part, they were well mannered and well behaved. We love every one of them and based on what we saw and heard, they will have a terrific season.

We wish them well and will do our utmost to support them. We only hope the rest of the town will see fit to do the same thing.

Respectfully
Harry and Charlotte Atamian

Wearing her wares There was no confusion as to the identity of the woman running the t-shirt press, during the telethon. John Brown's wife, otherwise known as Betty, set a trend. Several other women took up the idea and bought similar t-shirts.

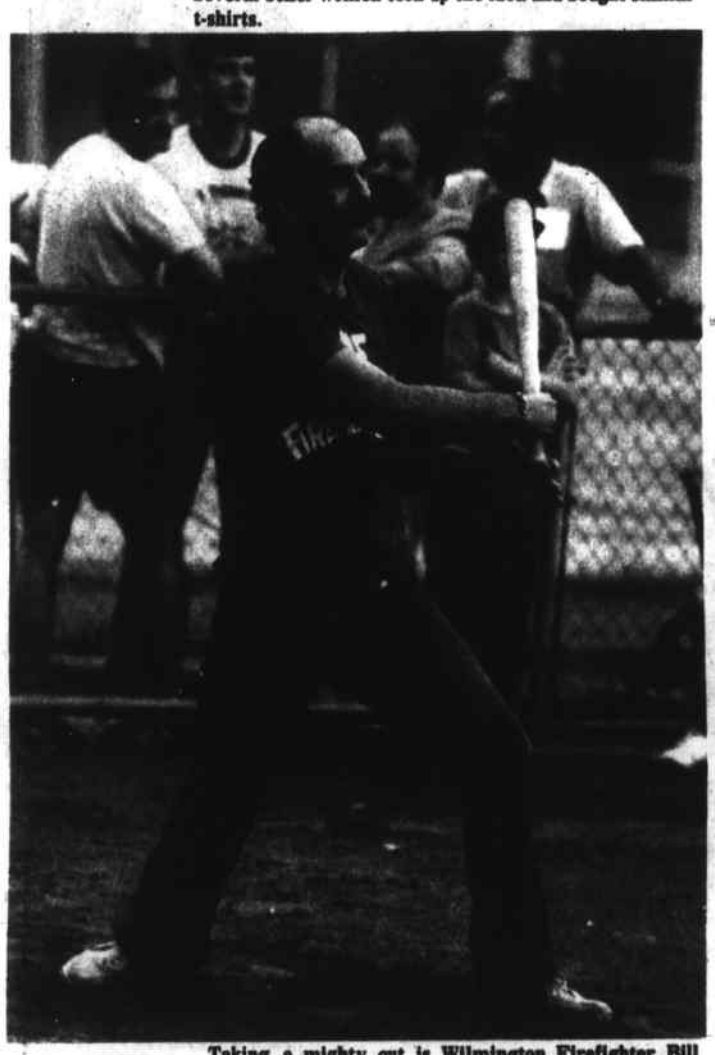

Mrs. Brown's husband The Muscular Dystrophy fund raising effort included a double header softball game, played Friday night at Livingston Street field in Tewksbury. The State Police beat the WBZ All Stars, 23 to 5, and the McDonald's All Stars topped the Firefighters 14 to 8.

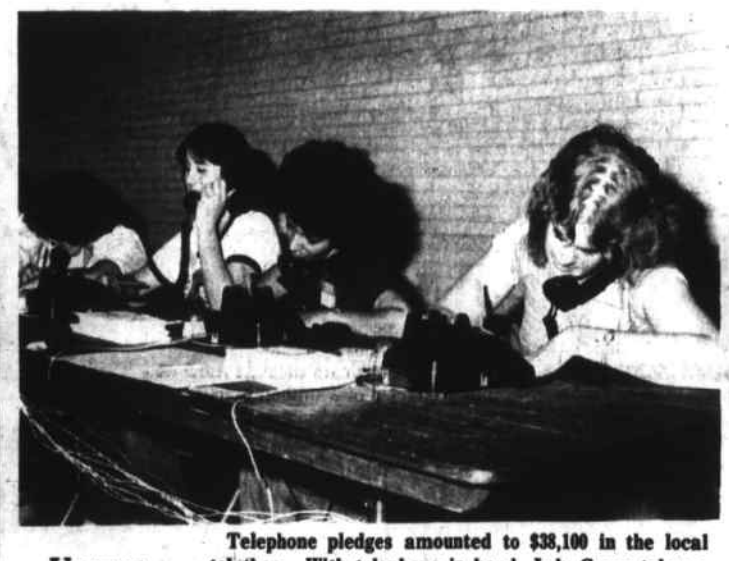

John Brown released a pitch in the Firefighters' losing effort. He is president of the Wilmington firefighters local, and co-chairman of the telethon.

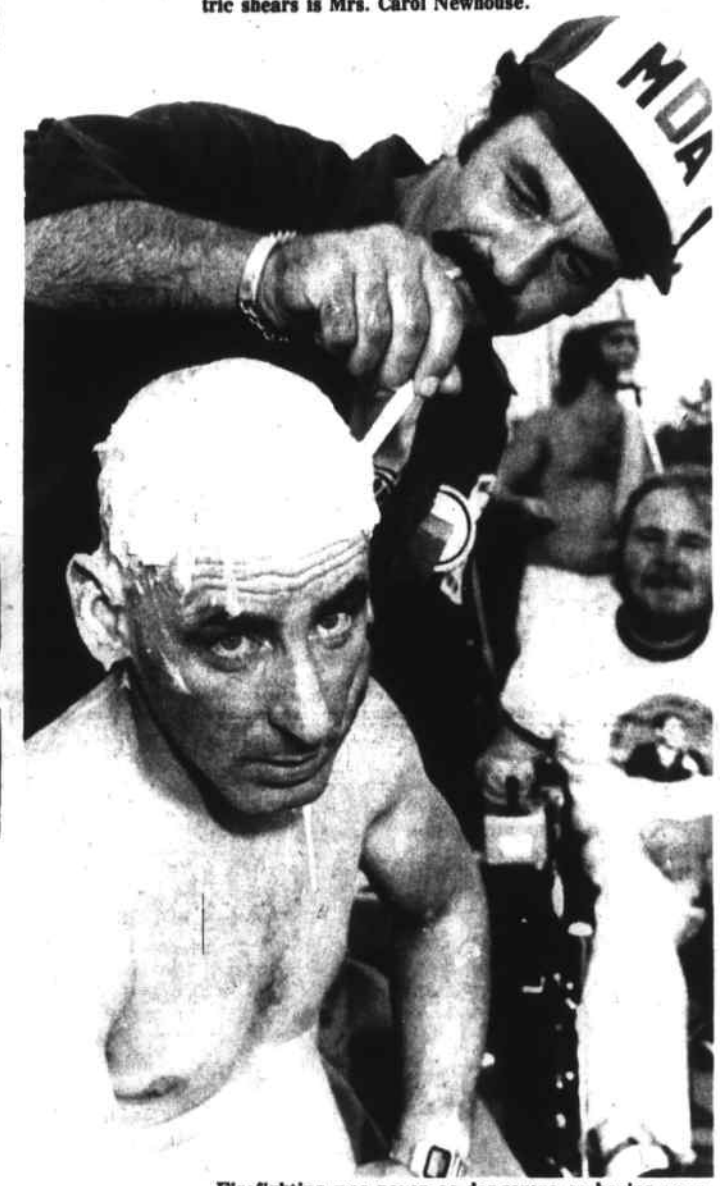

Total trim "Just a little off the side, please." But a little bit of hair was all that Buddy Warnock had left on his head, except for half a moustache. The Delilah weilding the electric shears is Mrs. Carol Newhouse.

Fanning firefighter Taking a mighty cut is Wilmington Firefighter Bill Lopez. In the background are Trooper Carmen Tammaro and Capt. Anthony Lopez of the Mass State Police, and Rep. James Miceli.

Unsung heroes Telephone pledges amounted to $38,100 in the local telethon. With telephone in hand, Judy Greer takes a call, while Peggy Barros and Robin Scamman write pledges.

Hazardous duty Firefighting was never as dangerous as having your head shaved by a fellow firefighter. Warnock sits while the lather drips, and Bill Lopez finishes the "trim." In the background at right is Donald Zirngiebel.

When he's not marching as a member of the Minuteman Company of the Aleppo Temple Shrine, Charlie Webster wears the hat of a lieutenant on the Wilmington Fire Department.

Matt's hats Like a Dr. Seuss tale, the MDA telethon had a seemingly endless supply of hats, which were offered for sale. One of the hats was worn by Matthew Lopez, whose father and uncle were working on the telethon.

Riding the rails

Anthony DeMascio found the kiddie train to be great fun. He got a helpful push from Carmen Tammaro of the Mass. State Police.

Pitch man

Tewksbury Fire Lieutenant Al Hancock not only helped build the dunk tank, but he conned the "dunkees" and then sold the chances to pitch the ball that would dunk the "dunkee." Seated on the platform in the upper right of the picture, waiting to be dunked, is Lisa Garland. Hancock's assistant pitch man is Jeff Strong of the North Reading Fire Department.

Top dollars

Perhaps the most successful fund raisers in the area for Muscular Dystrophy were Richard, Ken and Donna Foote. Together they collected $2100.

Fund raiser

Joanne Puleo single handedly collected $145 for MD, which she turned over to the telethon on Monday afternoon. The man with the microphone is State Police Capt. Tony Lopez. Seated in wheelchairs are Steve Zirngiebel (center) and his brother Donald, (right), both victims of Muscular Dystrophy.

As the parade passes by

The telethon's Labor Day activities began with a parade from Wilmington Plaza to the Oakdale Mall. Watching the parade pass Silver Lake were Mrs. Sonee Shepardson, with her children, Dorrie and Steven. The car at left is the 1979 Pinto, which was raffled off as a grand prize.

Telethon total tops goal by 20 percent

Each year, when the Northeast Firefighters Against Muscular Dystrophy hold their Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon, they break all the records, in terms of fundraising. This year was no exception.

Now in its fourth year, the local telethon had been escalating at a rate of about $10,000 a year. Last year, the telethon raised $66,000, so the firefighters set a goal of $75,000.

So successful was the 1979 telethon that the goal was topped by 20 per cent. By the time the phones stopped ringing on Monday evening, the local total had hit $89,735. In four years the NEFAMD had raised more than a quarter of a million dollars.

This year's figure roughly breaks down with $38,100 in telephone pledges, $22,000 from two days of fun at the Oakdale Mall, and $29,000 from other activities.

Behind the scenes

The Muscular Dystrophy telethon, of course, centers around telephone pledges, and someone has to answer the phones. Busy writing pledges are Claire Sanchez and Terry McMahon.

What do two schools in Wilmington have in common with the Watergate Hotel?

Round

When I opened the Town Crier and saw two pictures of round schools in Wilmington - the Boutwell and the Glen Road - something 'zinged' in me!

In a flash I went back to my childhood, to Europe, to major US cities!

We have long accepted the leaning tower of Pisa and the kiosks of Paris in their roundness. We're familiar with mundane water towers and romantic old castles which are round.

We've learned, even if only through photographs of modern cities, to accept the very tall round buildings in the Renaissance Center, Detroit, the Peachtree Plaza in Atlanta, the Washington Plaza in Seattle, etcetera.

Following through on my excitement, I contacted an Historical Commission member who confirmed my remembrance of a round house near our grammar school; it was built by a man whose first house was copied much to his annoyance, so he determined his second house would be much harder to emulate. That was in 1857. Although in disrepair, it still stands in the Spring Hill section of Somerville, Massachusetts.

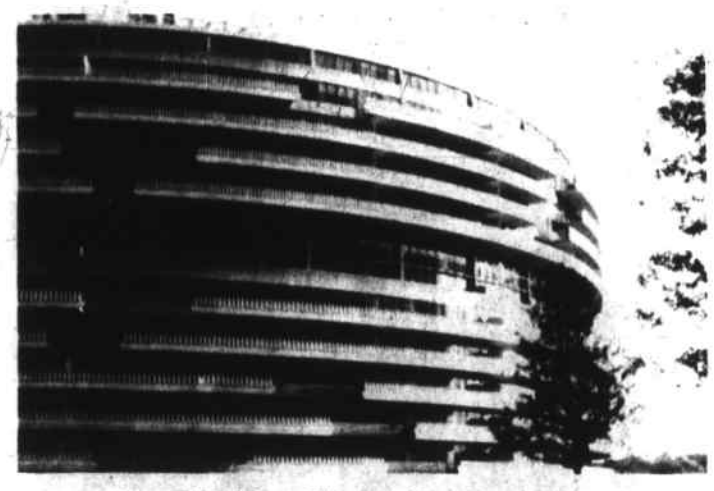

One of the latest, and very successful, round buildings is the fantastic Hirshorn Museum in Washington, D.C., where 2500 people gathered on opening night, "one of three outstanding cultural events connected with Washington in this century" according to an official.

If you want to see the most amazing round building, go to Dublin, Ireland. Just a short walk from the Intercontinental Hotel, the United States Embassy looks at first glance like a giant frosted cake! (There's a bust of former President John Kennedy in the foyer).

The Guggenheim Museum in New York set the world in its ear momentarily when it opened its win ding-ramped circular exhibition space.

But, here in Wilmington, we can thank Capt. Neilson for promoting, 20 years ago, the round shape of our two outstanding schools, for now, approaching 1980, the scientists have determined that a round shape is more energy-efficient! Maybe the next generation will go to school in geodesic domes?

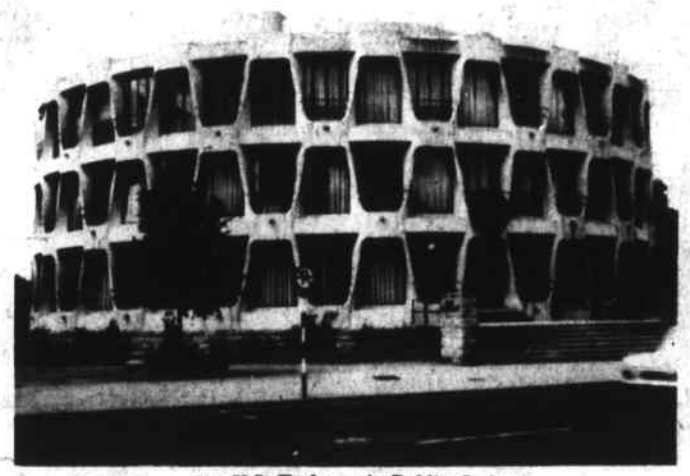

-Thalia Prescott

The infamous Watergate Hotel, also round.

'The Hiding Place' September 7, 8 and 9

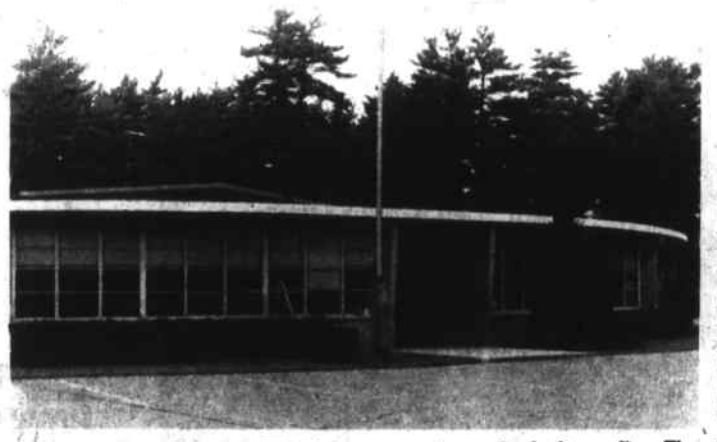

The true-life story of Corrie ten Boom, a former Nazi prisoner, will be presented through the motion picture, The Hiding Place on September 7, 8 and 9 at 7 p.m. at the Wilmington United Methodist Church.

This remarkable story of tragedy and victory shares the experiences of a family who was willing to risk all for others. The ten Booms became involved in the Dutch Underground during the German occupation of World War II by hiding Jews in a secret room built in their house, thereby aiding them in their escape from the Nazis. As a result of a raid by soldiers, Corrie's family was taken prisoner and Corrie was sent to the dreaded concentration camp, "Ravensbruck."

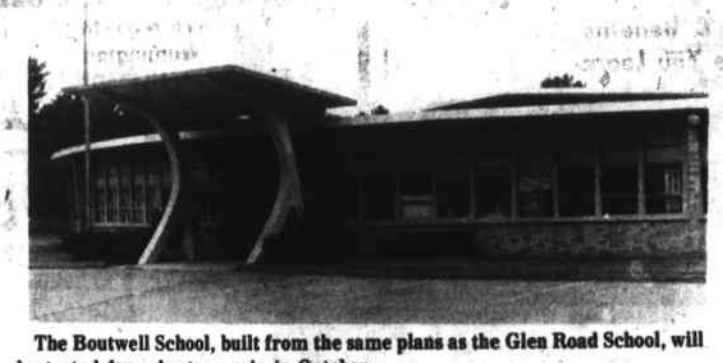

The Hiding Place portrays the dehumanizing agonies of a concentration camp...the personal confusion and conflicts of both victors and vanquished...the confrontation of military might and gentle ministry...and the costs of caring for others.

Millions of readers have cried, suffered and triumphed with Corrie Ten Boom and her family through the book The Hiding Place. Now a motion picture captures all the power, excitement and sheer dramatic force that sets this story apart from all others.

This special three-day showing of The Hiding Place is sponsored by the Wilmington Council of Churches.

The Boutwell School, built from the same plans as the Glen Road School, will be tested for asbestos again in October.

Careful please!

It has been noticed that many seniors have been making trips to hospitals and doctors, following falls in the home. These could perhaps have been avoided if certain precautions had been taken.

1. Throw rugs are dangerous, they should be anchored to the floor. A bare floor is the safest floor.
2. Mark the top and bottom steps with flourescent tape.
3. Keep a light near the bed, in the bathroom, hallways and near the stove.
4. Try to keep articles within reach, so as not to have to climb in order to reach them.
